Everything I say is Morgan's opinion. It's Morgan's perspective.

Candidate Morgan is different now because I have such a depth of what actually happens in the halls of congress.

You have to convince all the other members about what you think.

I've had conversations where the individual on the other side of the table is like "I don't want a border. I don't care about laws on the border. Anybody that wants to come across and plant a flag has the right to do so." Those conversations happen.

It's not Morgan representing the entire country. It's Morgan representing District 8.

We create appropriations bills, and appropriations bills fund the government.

I'm doing every single day – as hard as I can – to move laws in order to protect the people of Texas.

We have a spending problem. The process itself works, if you realize you can't spend more than you have.

Learning to be a congressional member. You have to understand your role.
