The US Air Force once had a programme to investigate sightings of Unidentified Flying Objects.

Project Blue Book was in operation from from 1947 to 1969.

Its aim was to determine if reported UFO sightings posed a threat to national security, a risk to pilots or if they were examples of advanced technology by hostile states.

In its 22 years of operation, the programme collected reports of 12,618 sightings most of which were found to be misidentifications of natural phenomena.

701 of the cases could not be explained, and remain on file as \"unidentified\".

The US Department of Defense has created a new organisation to investigate unidentified aerial phenomena.

The US All-domain Anomaly Resolution Office will also collect reports of unidentified objects in space and underwater.
